We also learn a lot of interesting information about Clinton Township and Waymart in the late-nineteenth century — because Alvin's third wife, Kate, had to prove to the government that she was entitled to receive a widow's pension following Alvin's death in 1894.

On the following page is a copy of of Alvin Squire's "Certificate of Union Service" that I ordered from the National Archives (through the Broadfoot Publishing Co.) in 1998.
